

	PHONETIC TRANSCRIPTION	IN YOUR WORDS	LANGUAGE ACQUISITION	TERMS	SYNTAX
100	A voiceless bilabial stop (P)	This TV/radio network wants to hire more announcers with regional accents (BBC)	A child is replacing this class of sounds with stops if he says /tree/ for three , /dose/ for those , /pall/ for fall , and /id/ for is (FRICATIVES)	Two sounds in a language that never occur in the same environment. (COMPLEMENTARY DISTRIBUTION, ALLOPHONES)	Possessive pronouns like my are a part of this lexical category. (DETERMINERS)
200	A voiced interdental fricative (ETH)	This is a method of communication by which a deaf-blind person places their hand on a speaking person's lips and jawline (TADOMA)	When forming wh-questions, the last thing children learn to do is this syntactic rule of English. (INVERT SUBJ-AUX)	I wouldn't hire nobody that did nothing like that. (NEGATIVE CONCORD)	"A nice picture of the unicorn" is an example of this type of phrase. (NOUN PHRASE)
300	A low front lax vowel (AE)	Barack Obama used this artist's song to identify with young, urban voters (Jay-Z)	This is the age where children start to prefer their parents language to other languages. (BIRTH – A FEW MONTHS)	This term refers to the overuse of a prestige item in speech, including using it in places that are outside of the standard usage (HYPERCORRECTION)	The word unlockable has two meanings, that correspond to two different trees, and is an example of this. (STRUCTURAL AMBIGUITY)
400	A high front tense vowel (IY)	Talking drums rely on this feature of West African languages (TONE)	A child is doing this when he calls a train, train tracks, a train conductor, a ticket, and a parking lot choo-choo . (COMPLEXIVE CONCEPT)	When two vowels are no longer perceivable as two different sounds, this is the type of sound change that has occurred. (VOWEL MERGER)	In the sentence "Is the girl is tall?" the child speaker has done this to the auxiliary verb. (COPIED IT)
500	The phenomenon that is commonly referred to as "dropping the g" actually refers to an alternation between a velar nasal and this kind of nasal. (ALVEOLAR)	This may be one indicator of sarcasm on the internet (EMOTICONS, J/K)	This is the name for a type of children's speech that lacks function words (TELEGRAPHIC)	Labov's 1966 study in New York showed that people tend to use more prestige forms in this style of speech than they do in reading, for instance. (WORD LISTS)	"Carrots, I like, but tomatoes, I detest." is an example of this type of syntactic process. (OBJECT NP TOPICALIZATION)

	LANGUAGE SHIFT	TYOLOGY & LANGUAGE CONTACT	VARIATION	MEANING	MIXED BAG
200	When language A adopts a word from language B and the adopted word becomes part of language A, it could be an example of this. (BORROWING)	This is an example of a highly analytical language (CHINESE)	This person conducted a well-known socio-linguistic study in 3 NYC department stores (LABOV)	The word terrific is an example of this type of semantic change (AMELIORATION)	This verb of quotation came into the English language in the early '80's (LIKE)
400	This hypothesis proposes that the language we speak influences how we think (WHORFIAN HYPOTHESIS)	Spanish is an example of this morphological type (FUSIONAL)	This term refers to the "earliest aquired linguistic system, accessible without metalinguistic thought" (VERNACULAR)	"Do not say what you believe to be false" is the description of this one of Grice's maxims (QUALITY)	This is the date of the LING 001-910 Final Exam (JULY 3)
600	The word algebra came into English from this language. (ARABIC)	When an L2 speaker of a language has an accent, it can be said to be a result of influence from this in their first language. (PHONOLOGY/PHONEMIC INVENTORY)	If a linguistic feature is always used by a certain age group it may be an example of this linguistic phenomenon (AGE-GRADING)	The sentence "I pronounce you man and wife" is an example of this type of speech act. (PERFORMATIVE)	"To boldy go where no man has gone before" is an example of a violation of this prescription in English (SPLIT INFINITIVE)
800	This community is an example of language shift (CAJUNS in LA, IMMIGRANTS IN US, GARIFUNA IN BELIZE...)	This is the most common aspect of language to be borrowed.(VOCABULARY)	This word is currently undergoing semantic expansion in Egypt, according to the New York Times. (INSHALLAH)	The word villian is an example of this type of semantic change (DEROGATION)	The suffix -ize in English can be categorized as this kind of morpheme. (BOUND, FUNCTION)
1000	This term is used to describe what happens when a bilingual person uses both of their languages within one sentence or phrase (CODE-SWITCHING)	The tree on is a translation of a Tamil prepositional phrase. According to this phrase, Tamil is syntactically this type of language (HEAD-FINAL)	If a linguistic feature is used more by younger people than by older people and is thought to be an incoming change the graph that shows this data could show an effect in this. (APPARENT TIME)	The sentence "Have you talked to your husband about the weekend?" has this type of trigger for a presupposition. (DEFINITE NOUN PHRASE)	This term refers to a change that speakers are not conscious of (CHANGE FROM BELOW)

TRIAL:

A voiceless interdental stop. WHAT IS 'THETA'? OR WHAT IS "TH"

A child is doing this when he calls a grapefruit, the moon, a basketball, and a bowling ball "orange". WHAT IS OVEREXTENSION?

The utterance "I promise I'll pay you $50 tomorrow" is an example of this type of speech act. WHAT IS PERFORMATIVE?